THE FUTURE SO BRIGHT

The music legends we'll embrace in the future are likely to be standing alone today. They are the visionaries who refuse to be viewed through the lens of their own time.

Instead, they challenge our expectations. They keep our eardrums guessing. And, often, they illuminate paths that might have otherwise remained hidden.

"I'm not very interested in recreating something from the past," says MNDR's Amanda Warner. "As an artist, I want to bring in a production level and a writing level that will be something fresh and new. That's the goal."

With her street-born style and fractured pop aesthetic, Amanda Warner is well on her way to achieving that goal. With her at the helm, MNDR makes the kind of music that pulls us forward, happily bobbing in a wake of candy razor melody and sawtooth synth. It's the kind of music we simply can't resist: the future kind.
